All pre-packaged foods bought in the UK are covered by EU-wide allergen labelling legislation. This means that a gluten-containing ingredient used as a deliberate ingredient in a product must appear on the ingredients list, regardless of the amount used.

Manufacturers must name the particular grain i.e. 'wheat', 'rye', 'barley', 'oats'; or some will use the word 'gluten' as well i.e. 'wheat gluten'. This information must be declared in the ingredients list so it is always important to check the ingredients list to assess suitability of a product.

Some manufacturers also use an allergy advice box to highlight the presence of gluten in a product. This is not compulsory but also helps in selection of products on a gluten-free diet.
