CUTS TO GLUTEN-FREE PRESCRIPTIONS BY GLOUCESTERSHIRE CCG IGNORE NICE QUALITY STANDARDS AND COULD COST THE NHS MORE IN THE LONG RUN

Coeliac UK is strongly opposing cuts to gluten-free prescriptions for patients across Gloucestershire following the decision made, without consultation, by the Gloucestershire Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) and announced on 19 October 2016.

Details of the cuts were ironically announced the same day that a new National Institute of Health and Care Excellence (NICE) quality standard on coeliac disease was published which highlights that enabling access to gluten-free food on prescription aids adherence to the gluten-free diet. The Health and Social Care Act 2012 sets out a clear expectation that the care system should consider NICE quality standards in planning and delivering services.

Sarah Sleet, chief executive of Coeliac UK, the national charity for people with coeliac disease said: "As NICE quality standards are developed in line with clinical evidence and expert consensus, it is clear that the decision by Gloucestershire CCG to remove vital front-line services, is being based on budget rather than patient need or clinical evidence. Cutting gluten-free prescribing exacerbates health inequalities, further disadvantaging the most vulnerable patients with coeliac disease."

Coeliac disease is a serious autoimmune condition caused by a reaction to gluten, a protein found in wheat, barley and rye. The charity believes any cuts to gluten-free prescriptions will leave vulnerable patients with coeliac disease without support which will affect their ability to stick to the gluten-free diet, which is the only treatment for the condition. The potential serious long term health complications of not maintaining a gluten-free diet include osteoporosis, infertility and, in some rare cases, small bowel cancer, conditions that could cost the NHS a lot more in the long run.

Last year Gloucestershire Clinical Commissioning Group spent a total of £379,000 on prescribed gluten-free foods for all patients in the region. However, all patients of any age will have their prescriptions cut from 30 November 2016, just six weeks after the announcement.

The charity refutes the claim made by the CCG which states:

'Gluten-free alternative foods and a wide range of naturally gluten-free foods are now very widely available in supermarkets.'

“For someone medically diagnosed with coeliac disease there is no choice but to stick to a gluten-free diet, day in day out for life and so access to gluten-free staples is critical, and is not as easy as you might think. The expansion of Free From aisles in large supermarkets masks the reality of very patchy provision. In particular, small stores and budget supermarkets have little, if any, gluten-free staples. Additionally, high prices make such products unaffordable for some. Both these issues put those most in need at risk – those on a limited budget or with limited mobility,” continued Ms Sleet.

Whilst gluten-free food staples such as pasta, are three to four times more expensive than comparable gluten-containing products, gram for gram, gluten-free bread is six times more expensive* than regular gluten containing bread in the supermarket. On top of this availability is limited in rural areas, discount supermarkets and small stores. Having access to gluten-free staple foods on prescription provides an essential level of support to individuals trying to keep to the gluten-free diet which is the only treatment for coeliac disease.

NICE has calculated that the cost of gluten-free food to the NHS equates to £194.24¹ per diagnosed patient per year, making it an extremely low cost treatment that addresses potential health inequality in the management of coeliac disease due to the higher cost and limited availability of gluten-free food.

“The provision of gluten-free staple food on prescription is a vital element of the support offered to all patients by the NHS and it is essential to prevent long term damage to health,” continued Ms Sleet.

In England, prescriptions for gluten-free food are not free of charge unless someone already qualifies for free prescriptions. Currently 60% of CCGs across the country adhere to National Prescribing Guidelines, providing recommendations for GPs and policymakers on reasonable amounts of gluten-free staple foods such as bread, flour and pasta per patient per month.

Notes to editor

- Coeliac disease is a serious illness where the body's immune system reacts to gluten found in food, making the body attack itself.
- 1 in 100 people in the UK has coeliac disease
- A wide range of case studies are available on request from Coeliac UK.
- Average time to diagnosis is 13 years.
- 1 in 4 people diagnosed with coeliac disease had previously been diagnosed with IBS.
- Gluten is a protein found in wheat (including spelt), rye and barley. Some people are also sensitive to oats. Obvious sources of gluten include breads, pastas, flours, cereals, cakes and biscuits. It is often used as an ingredient in many favourite foods such as fish fingers, sausages, gravies, sauces and soy sauce.
