

NICE Quality Standard

The first ever Quality Standard on coeliac disease, published by the National Institute of Health and Care Excellence (NICE), aims to drive standards in the diagnosis and care of people with coeliac disease.

The new standard sets out five key areas to improve diagnosis of coeliac disease and ensure that the support of patients with the condition improves their health and quality of life. One of the key themes of the standard is the need to address inequalities that might exist because of a patient's socioeconomic status, to ensure that those who need help most are being offered it.

Both offering annual review and having access to prescriptions for gluten-free food are noted as important levels of support for people with coeliac disease. In light of 10% of England's Clinical Commissioning Groups (CCGs) removing gluten-free prescribing as a support for those with the condition, Coeliac UK is writing to all CCGs to make them aware of the new Quality Standard and to ask how they will plan to meet its criteria.

The Charity played a key role in representing the needs of patients with coeliac disease during the development of the Quality Standard by making submissions to its consultations. Representatives of the Charity were selected as expert members of the Quality Standard committee.

Gluten-free barley research

In last month's newsletter we featured an article on the development of a gluten-free barley by researchers from Australia's Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organisation. The novel gluten-free barley has been developed using conventional breeding and the researchers are interested in the opinions of adults with coeliac disease, gluten intolerance, or carers of people with either of these conditions. If you haven't yet taken part and are interested in sharing your views on the gluten-free barley, please complete the online survey, which should take no more than 5 – 10 minutes: www.coeliac.org.uk/gfbarley-survey

Sponsored Dissertation Scheme

On 12 October we launched our Sponsored Dissertation Scheme. We wish to encourage undergraduates or postgraduates studying at UK institutions to focus on coeliac disease in their project work.

If you or someone you know might be interested in an award for a sponsored dissertation in coeliac disease, read more on our website.

NICE initial advice to people concerned about delays in conception

The National Institute of Health and Care Excellence (NICE) pathways bring together all NICE guidance, Quality Standards and other NICE information on a specific topic.

We contacted NICE to ensure there was cross reference between unexplained infertility and undiagnosed, and therefore untreated, coeliac disease. As a result of our discussions with NICE, the NICE pathway has included advice on testing for coeliac disease in cases of unexplained infertility within the initial assessment of people concerned about delays in conceiving.

Member Review Panel 2016

We are currently recruiting for this year's Panel to help us review the applications to our Sponsored Dissertation Scheme. Members on the Panel will be asked to review the summaries, anytime between 23 November and 7 December. If you are interested in participating on the Member Review Panel, please complete the online registration form.

Coeliac UK funded research

In an earlier newsletter this year, we made you aware of an opportunity to participate in a Coeliac UK funded research project exploring 'Patients' and healthcare professionals' perspectives on follow up in coeliac disease'.

Dr Manpreet Bains and her team have now completed all the patient interviews and written them up for analysis.

GUTs weekend away

Our Gluten-free Under Thirties (GUTs) group visited Birmingham at the beginning of October for their weekend city break. Everyone got involved in a range of activities including a canal trip, beer tasting, pizza night and meal out, all completely gluten-free! Members commented on how they loved 'meeting likeminded people' and 'feeling part of a community'. One Member said the weekend was 'such a great way to feel "normal", share stories and make wonderful friends'. Congratulations to the Committee for organising such a fun, inclusive and enjoyable weekend!

If you are between 18 and 30 years old, be part of the GUTs community by joining their Facebook Group.
